

Client Journey System — How It Works

A plain-language guide to every automation in the system, what it does for you, and the few things only you do.

The Big Picture

From the moment a client signs up until they finish their program, the system runs their journey by itself: their records, their check-in emails, their session counts, and your alerts. Everything is timed to each client's own start date, so nothing goes out in batches and no client ever gets an email that does not match where they are in their program.

CLIENT SIGNS UP -> system records their start date + program
-> you get an alert, coach gets their brief
WEEKS GO BY -> check-in emails arrive at the right week for THAT client
SESSIONS HAPPEN-> the session count updates by itself
LAST SESSION -> coach and client are both notified automatically
PROGRAM ENDS -> the what-comes-next email offers their continuation path
```

Automation 1 — When a Client Signs Up (WF-K1)

What starts it: a sale is marked as won.

What it does, all by itself:

- Records that day as the client's official program start date. Every future email is timed from it
- Reads which program they bought and sets their session count: 4, 6, or 12
- Sends you an alert for every new client, coaching and non-coaching, so you can track everyone from day one
- (Once the contracts are loaded) sends their program's agreement for e-signature, and files the signed copy on their profile

Automation 2 — The Milestone Emails (six automations, WF-K2a to K2f)

Each client gets check-in emails at the right week of their program, written in your voice and sent from your email, so replies come straight to you.

Email	When it arrives	Who gets it
Week 3 check-in	3 weeks after their start	Every client
Week 5 what-comes-next	5 weeks after start	6-session programs
Week 6 check-in	6 weeks after start	All except RMM Plus
Week 4 what-comes-next	4 weeks after start	RMM Plus only
Week 9 what-comes-next	9 weeks after start	RFB 1 Year only
Week 12 completion	12 weeks after start	RFB 1 Year only

If a client is already past a milestone when they enter the system, that email is skipped rather than sent late. Nobody ever gets a “week 3” email in week 10.

Automation 3 — The Session Counter (WF-K3)

What starts it: a session on a coach's calendar is marked as attended, or as a no-show (no-shows count as used, as you decided).

What it does: adds one to Sessions Used and subtracts one from Sessions Remaining on the client's profile. Any coach can glance at a client's record and see exactly where they stand. Nobody keeps a spreadsheet.

Automation 4 — The Last Session Alert (WF-K4)

What starts it: a client's Sessions Remaining reaches 1.

What it does: alerts their coach that the next session is the final one, and sends the client a heads-up note from you, so their questions about what happens next come straight to your inbox.

Automation 5 — The Coach Handoff (WF-K5)

What starts it: you assign a client to a coach in the system.

What it does: instantly sends that coach everything they need: the client's name, program, intake summary, and where to find their signed agreement. If you ever reassign a client, the new coach gets the same brief automatically.

Your Part — the Only Things a Human Does

When	What you do
A new client alert arrives	Assign them to their coach (that one click sends the coach their full brief)
A client replies to any check-in email	Reply like normal email, the conversation is yours from there
A last-session alert arrives	Have the continuation conversation when the moment is right
A session happens	The coach marks it attended or no-show on the calendar, that is the only bookkeeping
You want any email's wording changed	Send John the new text, it is swapped in minutes

Please Never Do These (ask John instead)

- Never add a contact into a workflow manually. The emails are timed to each client's dates; a manual add has no dates attached and fires every email at once
- Never edit the workflows themselves, even small changes can affect every enrolled client
- Never re-add a tag a client already had, that can restart automations and duplicate emails

- Anything you want changed or fixed: message John, changes take minutes and stay safe

Current Status

The system is fully built and tested, and sits ready to switch on. Going live waits on: the what-comes-next email pricing confirmation, the contract files, and the start-date setup for existing clients. Everything else is done.
